

Peach rocks House of Blues with free concert

Will Phoenix  December 5, 2013, 5:28 pm | Updated: December 8, 2013, 10:37 am

Share Share Share Share Tweet

If you're in California for the holidays those in the know say celebrate the season and sooth your soul at the same time as Los Angeles-based singer-songwriter-guitarist, Peach, plays a free, all-ages Blues Holiday Concert at L.A.'s. House of Blues in West Hollywood, December 8 at 7 p.m.

Peach has played with the likes of Paul Barrere (Little Feat), Joey Delgado (Delgado Brothers), Marty Grebb (The Buckingham), Garth Hudson (The Band) Reggie McBride (Elton John), and Taj Mahal. Interestingly, she has even played with Condoleezza Rice. The National Security Adviser was once Peach's accompanist. "She was on her way to being a great starving musician," Peach smiles.

Peach's performance in the HOB's Voodoo Lounge will also include her backing band the Blues All-Stars. The group currently consists of bassist Will MacGregor (Chuck Berry), guitarist Josh Sklair (Etta James), keyboardist Ken Stange (Joe Cocker), and drummer Tom Walsh (Spyro Gyra).

Peach and the boys will also be playing a second free, all-ages concert at the L.A. House of Blues on Sunday, January 12 at 7 p.m. If previous performances are any indication, Peach and the Blues All-Stars will provide music fans with some spontaneous, memorable musical moments as she performs not only old school blues but more contemporary cuts as well. As Peach once said, "It's all pretty sexy music, but it's also really real."

(Images courtesy of Peach and Mary Sparks)

<http://americanlivewire.com/peach-rocks-house-blues-free-concert/>